Differences Between High School and College

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>High School</th>
<th>College</th>

</table>
| Teacher/Student Contact:
Teacher/Student contact is closer and more frequent (5 days per week). Very little responsibility is placed on the student to attend class.
  - Students attend class because they are already at school | Teacher/Student Contact:
Faculty members are available during their office hours or by appointment to address concerns. Students are responsible for meeting with their professors.
  - Students must choose to attend class |
| Competition and Grades:
Academic establish a personal status in academic and social activities based on family and community factors. | Competition and Grades:
Academic competition is much stronger, minimum effort may produce poor grades. The student’s perception that he/she is giving maximum effort may not result in a top grade. |
| Status:
Students establish a personal status in academic and social activities based on family and community factors. | Status:
Students can build their status as they wish; high school status can be repeated or changed. |
| Counseling and Dependence:
Students can rely on parents, teachers and counselors to help make decisions and give advice. Students must abide by parents’ boundaries and restrictions. | Counseling and Dependence:
Students rely on themselves; they see the results of making their own decisions. It is their responsibility to seek advice as needed. Students set their own restrictions. |
| Motivation:
Students get stimulation to achieve or participate from parents, teachers, and counselors. | Motivation:
Students supply their own motivation to their work and activities. |
| Freedom:
Students’ freedom is limited. Parents will often help students out of crisis, if one occurs. | Freedom:
Students have much more freedom. Students must accept responsibility for their own actions. |
| Value Judgment:
Students often make value judgments based on parental values. Many of their judgments are made for them. | Value Judgment:
Students have the opportunity to develop their own opinions and values. To be successful, students must be willing to learn about and respect differences. |
| Distractions:
The opportunity for more distractions exists. Time management and setting priorities become more important. |
THE FRESHMAN YEAR

Your student’s first year is going to be one of many ups and downs. Being aware of what your student may be going through will better enable you to help ease them into their college transition.

PHASE

1  Early summer anticipation
   This is when high school seniors graduate and begin to look toward the future. They have feelings of sadness, accomplishment, and anticipation.

2  Midsummer anxiety
   Now they begin to realize that they will soon be less connected to home, family, friends, and the security that each offers.

3  Late summer panic
   The student is plunged into the collegiate environment complete with college-bureaucracy, classrooms, homework, a foreign social world, and possibly a new roommate.

4  The honeymoon
   A couple of new friends and no text for at least three weeks. Let’s go have some fun! For some, they may use this as an opportunity to join a handful of organizations and be just as involved as they were in high school.

5  The reality check
   Where did all of this work come from? What do you mean I have to read the textbook? This paper has to be how long and it’s due when? And where did all the time go? Homesickness may appear during this phase. (TIP: This would be a great time to send a care package!)

6  The grass is always greener…
   They are sure that transferring somewhere else will solve their problems. No doubt they would be doing better at another university or college.

7  You can’t go home again
   This starts the first time they come home to visit. They are hit with the harsh realization that life for the rest of the family goes on without them. (TIP: Outline the new expectations you have for your student at home.)

8  Primitive coping behavior
   Well into the first semester, they finally learned to use the library and hold reasonably intelligent conversations. They are excited about the things they have learned.

9  Realization
   This phase usually precedes finals. They realize the great amount of work ahead and know that the future depends largely on their ability to balance academic activities with social activities.

10  Putting it together
SOME THINGS TO LEARN BEFORE COMING TO BARTON

Financial Limitations:

- Be clear about what you can contribute toward expenses in advance.
- Talk to your student about what their financial responsibilities should be, whether it is working a part-time job, applying for financial aid or taking out a student loan.
- Be sure to remind them that every family is different and therefore their friends may have different financial obligations and responsibilities.
- Parents’ homeowner’s insurance usually covers the personal belongings of a full-time student while living in a college residence hall. Check with your insurance company for how much insurance, if any, you have.

Managing Money

Depending on your financial plan, your student may need to learn to:

- Budget money
- Write a check
- Balance a checkbook
- Use a credit card responsibly
- Pay bills
- Use an ATM

Knowing the Basics

Students should know how to:

- Do laundry
- Clean
- Cook

Sharing a Room

Having a new roommate can be a big adjustment that requires new social skills. Contacting the new roommate over the summer can be a great way to ease into the transition (Facebook, E-mail, Text). It also allows for them to discuss class schedules, study habits, and a great opportunity to discuss who can bring what. That way your student won’t end up with two microwaves and two televisions.

Managing Time

Talking to your student about time management may help with the transition from high school to college. Scheduling time for studying, outside interests, and family obligations can help reduce stress and improve academic success. Encourage your student to use a planner. Write down and important dates your family may have such as holidays and birthdays for your student. This also helps your student stay connected to what is going on back home.
TEN TIPS FOR PARENTING A COUGAR

Rule #1: Don’t ask them if they’re homesick

The power of suggestion can be dangerous. The idea of being homesick usually doesn’t occur until someone suggests it. The first few days/weeks of college are activity-packed and friend-jammed and the challenge of meeting new people and adjusting to new situations takes a majority of a freshman’s time and concentration. So, unless a well-meaning parent reminds them of it, they’ll probably be able to escape the loneliness and frustrations of homesickness. And, even if they don’t tell you during those first few weeks, they really do miss you.

Rule #2: Write (even if they don’t write back)

Although freshman are typically eager to experience all the away-from-home independence they can in those first weeks, most are still anxious for family ties and the security those ties bring. This surge of independence may be misinterpreted by sensitive parents as rejection, but most freshmen (although 99% won’t ever admit it) would give anything for some news of home and family; however, mundane it may seem to you.

There’s nothing more depressing than a week of an empty mailbox. (Warning: don’t expect a reply to every letter you write. The “you write one, they write one” sequence isn’t always followed by college students; so get set for some unanswered correspondence.) Many Barton students and their parents keep in contact by using e-mail. E-mail access is free service to all Barton students.

Rule #3: Ask????? (but not too many)

College freshmen are “cool” (or so they think) and have a tendency to resent interference with their new lifestyle, but most still desire the security of knowing that someone is still interested in them. Parental curiosity can be obnoxious and alienating or relief giving, depending on the attitude of the person involved. “I have a right to know” tinged questions with ulterior motives or nagging should be avoided. Honest inquiries, however, and other “between friends” communication and discussion will do much to further the parent-freshman relationship.

Rule #4: Don’t worry (too much) about distressed phone calls or letters

Parenting can be a thankless job, especially during the college years. It’s a lot of give and only a little take. Often when troubles become too much for a freshman to handle (a flunked test, end of relationship and a shrunken pair of jeans all in one day), the only place to turn is home. Be patient with those “nothing is going right I hate this place” phone calls, letters or e-mails. You’re providing a real service as an advice dispenser, sympathetic ear or punching bag. Granted, it’s a service that makes you feel lousy, but it works wonders for a frustrated student.

Rule #5: Visit (but not too often)

Visits by parents (especially when accompanied by shopping sprees and/or dinner out) are another part of the first-year events that freshmen are reluctant to admit liking, but they appreciate them greatly. Pretended disdain of those visits is just another part of the first-year syndrome. These visits give the student a chance to introduce some of the important people in both their now important worlds (home and school) to each other. Additionally, it’s a way for parents to become familiar with (and, hopefully, more understand of) their student’s new activities, commitments, and friends. Spur of the moment “surprises” are usually not appreciated. (Preemption of planned weekend of studying or other activities can have disastrous results.)
Rule #6: Don’t tell your student that “these are the best years of their lives.”

The freshman year can be full of indecisions, insecurities, disappointments and mistakes. It’s also full of discovery, inspiration and fun. It takes a while for some students to accept that being unhappy, afraid, confused, disliked and making mistakes are all part of the show, all part of this new reality and of growing up.

Parents who believe that all college students get good grades, know what they want to major in, always have activity-packed weekends with thousands of close friends and lead carefree lives, are wrong. So are the parents that think college-educated means mistake-proof. Parents that insist upon the “best years” stereotype are working against their student’s already difficult self-development. Those who accept and understand the highs and lows of their student’s reality are providing the support and encouragement where it is needed most.

Rule #7: Take time to discuss finances

Most college students are still financially dependent on their parents to some degree. Sit down and discuss your family’s financial situation with your son or daughter. Students need to know how much money will be available to them and how much of the financial responsibility is theirs.

Rule #8: Prepare for their return

When the school year ends and your student returns home for break, sit down and discuss the rules of living at home. Parents need to respect the individuality their students have worked hard to achieve and students need to know there are rules and courtesies to be observed.

Rule #9: Trust them

Finding one’s self is difficult enough without feeling that the people whose opinions you respect most are second-guessing you. One of the most important things you can do as a parent is to let your child know that you trust his/her judgment.

Rule #10: Expect change

Your student will change (either drastically within the first months, slowly over the college years or somewhere in between). It’s natural, inevitable and it can be inspiring and beautiful. Often it’s a pain in the neck.

College, and experiences associated with it, can affect changes in social, vocational and personal behavior. An up-to-now wallflower may become a fraternity sweetheart; a pre-med student may discover stronger love for drama and literature; or a high school radical may become a college preppy. You can’t stop change. You may not even understand it, but it is within your power to accept it.

Remember that your freshman will remain basically the same person you sent away to school, aside from the interest and personality changes. Don’t expect too much too soon. Maturation is not an instantaneous or overnight process, and you might well discover your freshman returning home with some of the habits and hang-ups, however unsophisticated, you that he or she had “grown out of.”

Be patient!
CARE PACKAGE IDEAS

Sending care packages to your student is one of the nice things you can do. Receiving a package in the mail not only will make your student the envy of the residence hall, but it will also let them know you care. There are many times when a small gift can brighten up a bad day, a bad grade or a bad situation.

1 Your love and support
ESPECIALLY FOR FAMILIES OF COMMUTER STUDENTS

THE FAMILY TRANSITION

If your student has decided to live at home and drive to school each day, they are considered a commuter student. And you will soon find that when that happens, your entire family will go through transition. Many of the rules and responsibilities that worked so well during the high school years will change to accommodate your students need to balance academic, work and family demands. Your role as a parent will also likely change, from one of a provider and caretaker, to more of a friend and advisor.

Here are some things to keep in mind about changes in your student that might also affect the family:

- Your student might experience uncertainty and discomfort with change. Be patient as they come to terms with their own limitations and discover new abilities.
- He or she will be learning to make decisions on their own. Be available to advise, but let them make their own choices.
- Avoid doing things for your student he or she can do for themselves.
- Expect ups and downs as your student adjusts to the demands of change and anxiety and excitement that accompany it.
- College students often change their appearance, career choice, language and habits. They may even explore new religions and cultures. This is likely exploration rather than outright rejection of your family’s values. Try to be patient; your student is also likely to return (eventually) to the values and culture they are familiar with.

COMMUTER versus RESIDENT STUDENTS

There are a number of ways commuter students differ from resident students:

- They are more likely to work than students who live on campus.
- They may experience more difficulty finding a balance in work, education, family and educational demands.
- Their time on campus is more limited and they may have difficulty establishing relationships with instructors and taking advantage of academic support services.
- They are more diverse than resident students in terms of age, experience and culture.
- They experience more challenges in finding ways to pay for college.
- They are less involved socially on campus.
- Commuter students have difficulty figuring out what to do with large blocks of time between classes and finding a place to keep books and personal belongings while they are on campus.
GETTING INVOLVED ON CAMPUS

By far the biggest challenge your student will face as a commuter is involvement on campus, both academically and socially. Involved students are more likely to make new friends, be more satisfied with the college experience and succeed academically. Future employers often look to a student’s campus involvement as an indicator of their success in working within a team and leadership skills. Because your student is likely to spend less time on campus than a resident student, he or she may miss important co-curricular opportunities and will need to expend more effort to become involved on campus.

Your student may also lack motivation or interest in making new friends because ties to old friends are still strong and/or they are maintaining friendships with students who have gone away to school. Their campus involvement might also be limited because they are carpooling with another person.

Barton Community College offers over 20 different student organizations and clubs to enhance the college experience. There are academic organizations, religious groups, service clubs and things that are just for fun, like intramural sports.

Your student might also experience more difficulty getting to know their instructors and getting help with academic challenges. Encourage your student to plan time in his or her schedule for things like tutoring services and academic advising. These and other student services on campus can be essential to student success.

HOW TO HELP YOUR STUDENT SUCCEED

We’ve pointed out a number of changes and challenges that your student—and your family—will face during college. There are lots of ways you can show your support and encourage your student to help ensure he or she will succeed.

- Discuss your expectations before the school year begins. (How will grades be reported? How much time will be spent with family? What rules will you expect the students to follow? What rules will no longer apply?)
- Keep a calendar with family, work and school events marked. Try to be flexible when there are conflicts.
- Trust your student to make good decisions, even if you disagree with the choices they make.
- Applaud your student’s successes.
- Offer non-judgmental encouragement and sympathy when things go wrong.
- Be open to new ideas.
- Treat your student as an adult. Work out problems and conflicts together.
- Be patient with your student’s new-found independence. Give them the “space” they need to learn from their mistakes and learn to trust themselves.
- Plan to attend important events on campus with your student. Such as Homecoming, Sporting Events, etc. Commuter student families are not as likely to participate in these events, but it will show your student that you want to understand and participate in their new experiences.
- Invite your student’s college friends to your home.
- Arrange a quiet area and/or quiet time for the student to study and work on projects.
- Ask how they are doing at school, but try to avoid giving unsolicited advice.
STUDENT CLUBS & ORGANIZATIONS

Barton’s activity program supplements the instructional program by providing experiences that will add to your enjoyment of life and stimulate personal growth and social development. Student interest organizations, clubs and activities have been created to provide these opportunities and experiences. Each club or organization has one to two faculty or staff sponsors who are directly responsible to and for their respective groups. The Director of Student Life oversees these activities and clubs.

HEALTHY LIFESTYLE

Barton Community College is a community that prides itself on the safety and health of its students. However, that doesn't mean that you shouldn’t talk to your student before they leave home about safety measures and precautions as well as some advice on a healthy lifestyle.

Safety Measures

Make sure your student knows to:
- Walk only where it’s safe—and never walk alone at night
- Never go to or leave a party with people they don’t know well
- Never drink and drive or ride with a driver who’s been drinking or using other drugs
- Keep their room locked
- Keep their car locked
- Keep their bike properly chained to bike racks

How to protect a residence hall room:
- Keep doors and windows locked at all times
- Draw curtains at night
- Keep money and jewelry in a safe place
- Keep valuables out of sight
- Leave a light on when you leave
- Make a record of valuables and credit cards for insurance purposes
- Avoid leaving a message on your door or answering machine saying you’re not in your room
- Report broken lights, locks, and doors, and windows ASAP
- Use the peephole before opening the door
- Don’t hide a spare key in an obvious place
- Don’t prop doors open (inside or outside)

Safe Sex

Remind your student of your values about sexual behavior. Review the facts they need to stay safe and make wise decisions. Go over the risk of STDs (sexually transmitted diseases), including HIV (the virus that causes AIDS).

Date Rape and Abuse

Make sure your student understands the dangers. Talk about how to prevent situations that could put them at risk. Explain how drinking and other drugs, or being around others who do, can increase the risk of date rape and abuse.

Nutrition and Fitness

After entering college, most students find themselves eating on the run and not very healthy. It is also difficult to find the time and energy to exercise. Before your student leaves for school, talk to them about the importance of staying fit and eating healthy. Remind them that a proper diet and regular exercise can help. Encourage them to find out about available exercise programs and facilities, including intramural sports.

Also, students should have a physical exam before leaving. All immunizations should be up to date. Dental, eye, and ear exams are also recommended.
ALCOHOL AND OTHER DRUGS

When many freshmen enter into college, they may feel some pressure to start drinking in order to be "cool." Discuss your own views about these substances. It is important to start discussing these issues before your student leaves for college.

Right now:
Share realistically your own experiences with drinking, both negative and positive. Be clear in what you expect from them about such things as:
- Attending class
- Drinking and driving
- Financial responsibility
- Choices regarding drinking
- Study time vs. social time
- Staying in touch

Conversation starters:
- How will you decide whether or not to drink in college?
- What will you do if you find yourself at a party with only alcohol to drink?
- What will you do if your roommate only wants to drink and party?
- What will you do if you find a student passed out in the bathroom?
- How will you handle it if you are asked to baby-sit someone who is very drunk?

Once they're in college:
Since the first six weeks of college is a very high-risk time for first year students, you may want to write or e-mail more frequently and BE MORE SUPPORTIVE. Ask questions such as:
- How are you doing?
- Do you like your classes?
- Have you gone to any parties yet? If so, what did you think?
- What kinds of activities are available? Have you joined any clubs or organizations?
- Are you enjoying campus life? Why?
- How are you getting along with your roommate?
- What can I do to help?

Need additional help?
Professional counseling is available to help students with personal issues or academic concerns that would ultimately affect the achievement of their academic goals. Counseling is also available to assist students in exploring choices, recognizing consequences, and assuming personal responsibility. Referral services are available for career counseling on campus, as well as for community resources. For counseling services, call (620) 792-9295.

ACADEMIC ADVISING

Student Responsibilities

- Share information with advisors regarding interests, goals, educational, and career plans.
- Share personal information that has a bearing on academic careers. The numbers of hours spent at work, responsibilities to family, financial aid status, and any limitations are all necessary information for advisors.
- Be familiar with the College Catalog and the Student Handbook. These are vital sources of information.
- Make a note of advisor's advising hours and phone number. When students cannot meet during the designated hours, they are expected to schedule appointments and to call if they are unable to keep appointments.
- Keep a record of graduation requirements. Students should keep copies of ALL correspondence from the college, and from meetings with their advisors. It is ultimately the students' responsibility to fulfill the requirements for graduation.
- Be familiar with college deadlines, which can be found in the Student Handbook.
- Be willing to contact the appropriate student support services available on campus. The Student Handbook is an excellent resource.
- Be prepared for meetings with advisors, particularly when registering for next semester. Students should review what courses are still necessary for their programs and have an idea of what courses they would like to take as electives.
- Alert their advisors immediately if they begin to have difficulties that are affecting their class work or continued enrollment.
- Be an active participant in the advising sessions.

If students have questions about the advising process or are unclear about the advising services available at Barton, they should contact the Advisement Coordinator in the Advisement Center, located in the north end of the Learning Resources Center or call 792-9225.

Advisor Responsibilities

Your assigned academic advisor will provide a friendly, open environment that will foster self-exploration, self-awareness and self-evaluation thus enhancing a sense of personal identity, and they are accessible to all advisees and exhibit an open-door policy. Additionally, advisors assist students in exploring the possible short and long-range consequences of their choices and to facilitate student's recognition and acceptance of personal responsibility for what happens to their lives.

Advisors, with the assistance from their advisee, must focus not just on a semester-by-semester plan but a tentative college career plan that may encompass several years as well as what may or may not happen beyond college and training.

Your advisor can help you with many things. Here are a few:
- Career Options
- Enrollment
- Dropping/Adding a class
- Changing majors and/or advisors
- Graduation requirements
- Advice on courses, schools, and anything you want to talk about
