Why Barton?

- Associate of Science degree.
- Program prepares students to transfer to a university in Computer Science and Computer Information Systems.
- Students have the opportunity to be involved with Local Area Network parties, field trips, and the student driven computer club.
- Courses are taught using hands-on approach to learning the latest technology.
- Instructors build relationships with students and are aware of their learning goals.
- Computer Information Systems Majors:
  - Take classes in programming (C++, Java, Visual Basic), database and accounting.
- Computer Science Majors:
  - Take classes in programming (C++, Java, Visual Basic), foundations of Computer Science and higher level mathematics.

Occupational Outlook:

- Job prospects will be best for applicants with a bachelor’s degree and experience with a variety of programming languages and tools.

  Kansas Career Pipeline

- Average annual earnings of wage and salary Computer Software Developers (Computer Science Major) was $88,870 in 2013.

  Source Kansas Department of Labor

- Average annual earnings of wage and salary Computer Systems Analyst (Computer Information Systems Major) was $79,040 in 2013.

  Source Kansas Department of Labor